Some weeks ago a well-known Japanese shipping firm in Hyogo, of good standing, chartered the Rheingold from a foreign firm in Kobe and then sub-chartered her to others for a voyage up north to the Hokkaido, to. The vessel was duly loaded here, and left for the Hokkeilde, proceeding first to Fushiki for the purpose of taking in cargo there. At Fashiki the captain discovered that the vessel had snatained some injury. which was of a ch a nature that it was necessary to wire home to his owners for instructions. He did this and received a cablegram to repair and proceed. Repairs were at once commenced, and as soon as the vessel was made tight, notice was given to the Japanese that the Rheingold was ready to leave the port. Meanwhile, in consequence of the delay, it is stated that the subcharterers found they had lost the cargo which they expected to bring back from the north; On the 14th of October a seaman was arrested who walked quietly up to him with a revolver, dis. 15 for salesp on duty as against 16, 5 for leaving and, having no further use for the vessel, it would appear that they determined to attempt evading their responsibilities.
